

94-0011

The invention relates to the cigar filter contains a porous stopper settled in an impermeable cover for smoke with longitudinal grooves with semicircle section and opened from one side that is placed symmetrical on its surface. It is characterized by the fact that the grooves on the surface of the cover are situated in such a way that their open section are placed at the end of the filter oriented to the smoker mouth, the surface of the transversal section of the grooves being of 0,12-1% from the total surface of the transversal section of the filter and the number of the grooves are from 3 to 7.

Drawings: 3, Drawing 1.