

96-0109

The device for feeding the tobacco fibres to the cigarette manufacturing machines relates to the tobacco industry and is intended for the dozed group feeding of cigarette machines when manufacturing the smoking articles.

The summary of the invention consists in the fact that the device comprises a rotatable drum, a cylindrical casing with outlet openings and outlet branch pipes, a circular chamber, for that the circular chamber button is made traveling and its aedges are at the outlet opening level and are curved on the periphery.

The technical result of the invention consists in the even distribution of the out tobacco to the cigarette machines with the tobacco fibress least lones.