

The invention refers to the medical engineering, namely to devices meant for determination of the mandible fractures consolidation dynamics.

Summary of the invention consists in that the device contains a bearing surface, joined with a dynamometer through a tie-rod. The bearing surface may be made in the form of a mandibular cap onto 4...6 teeth.