

a 2004 0240

The invention relates to the medicine, in particular to surgery and proctology, and may be used for treatment of chronic hemorrhoid and acute anal thromboses complicated with hemorrhage and pain syndrome.

Summary of the invention consists in that there are carried out purgative enemas in the preoperative period, it is treated the operation field with antiseptic solutions, then it is made the incision of mucosa in the hemorrhoid nodule region; the hemorrhoids are ligated in the hilum region and are excised. After removal of the hemorrhoid nodules it is carried out the final hemostasis and there are treated the venous stumps. Afterwards, it is applied the first suture onto the mucosa in the stump region and is ligated, then it is applied the second suture through the knot of which there are passed the threads of the first suture tightening in radial direction the venous stump sutured with the intestinal mucosa, and the rest of the wound is sutured with simple interrupted sutures. Then, after treatment of the wounds there is intubated the large intestine.

Claims: 1