

a 2005 0086

The invention refers to pisciculture, namely to fodders for cyprinides larvae.

The fodder, according to the invention, contains, in mass units: biomass and culture fluid of the pigmentary yeast Rhodotorula gracilis, cultivated on medium enriched with zinc, correspondingly 48...50 and 18...28, fish meal 34...36, wheat flour 5...6, methionine 0,5...1,0 and mineral vitamin premix 0,5...1,0.

The result consists in increasing the fish larvae weight and viability.

Claims: 1