

a 2000 0024

The invention relates to the construction, in particular to a process for manufacture of hollow building stones, which may be used for the construction of dwelling houses, public buildings, agrozootechnical structures etc.

The process for manufacture of hollow building stones includes the stratified filling into forms of the concrete mix, vibrocompression after filling up of each layer and compaction with subsequent formation of hollows by means of punches after vibrocompression of each layers.

Claims: 1